MONDAY, June 17. 1765. [Numb. 1554]

The BOSTON Evening-Post.

Containing the freſheſt Advices, Foreign and Domeſtick.

Continuation of the Piece entitled Remarks, &c. begun in our laſt. page 99

THE Engliſh papers inform us, That eſtimates of the quantities of rum, diſtilled at New-York, Boſton, and Philadelphia, for two years paſt, had been received by the Packet; and that endeavours would be uſed in parliament, to prohibit the provinces above mention'd, from diſtilling rum, as being hurtful to the Weſt-India planters, &c. And, That it is reported, a Bill will ſhortly be brought into parliament, to prohibit, under a ſevere penalty, the uſe of ſtills in the Engliſh North-American colonies, unleſs for the uſes of Chymiſtry and Medicine, &c.

I ſhall here attempt to inveſtigate the cauſes of the difference between prices of the produce of the Engliſh Weſt-India iſlands, and thoſe of the French and other nations,——which difference is the only cauſe of the contraband trade that has been carried on between the Engliſh colonies and thoſe iſlands: For if our own iſlands could give as good a price for the produce of the colonies, and return them ſufficient ſupplies of Weſt-India commodities as cheap, the colonies would never apply to the iſlands of other nations, for what they could as well procure of our own.

Let us inquire then, why our iſlands cannot ſell their commodities as cheap, and give as much for our produce, as the iſlands of other nations?——Slaves who perform almoſt all the work, come much cheaper to our iſlands than to them.——But before I begin this inquiry, the ſubject ſeems to require a few reflections to put it in a clearer light.

I ſhould readily agree, that it would be moſt deſirable, that every part of the extenſive dominions of Great-Britain, ſhould be apropriated to the culture and improvement of ſuch commodities as each place is beſt fitted by nature to produce.——And if the miniſtry, inſtead of ſtudying and conſulting a ſyſtem of corruption, deſtructive of the fundamentals of the Engliſh conſtitution, and the natural rights of mankind, which muſt ſoon produce ſome terrible revolution, or end in national ruin——If inſtead of this, their Studies were directed to objects ſuitable to the dignity and importance of their appointment, I cannot but think that the Britiſh Empire might be ſo framed, diſpoſed and managed as to form one compact body in itſelf, wherein there ſhould be no inconſiſtency or claſhing of intereſts between one part and another, but every one ſhould be happy in itſelf, and conducive to the happineſs of all the reſt.——But this requires great application, and the moſt accurate knowledge of every part, and is not conſiſtent with that indolence, luxury, and diſſipation which are often conſpicuous in men who preſume, at adventures, to decide the fate of nations, and trample upon the rights of mankind. This has been moſt ſhamefully neglected in the Britiſh dominions, and to remedy the inconveniencies ariſing from the neglect, prohibitions have been laid to reſtrain people from the free uſe of their own property, and to turn the courſe of buſineſs——into unnatural channels. But this expedient is attended with greater evils than it remedies:——Hence ariſes ſmuggling and all the dreadful train of evils attendant upon it. All arts will be uſed to break thro' the reſtraint, and numbers will ſucceed in it, ſo as to fruſtrate the deſign of the prohibition; to enforce which a greater expence is neceſſary than the amount of the profits ariſing from it. The prohibition falls ſolely upon the honeſt, the conſcientious, the fair trader, and the worthieſt part of the community: But the man who has his conſcience at command, and can break through the reſtraints of an oath, (or prevail upon others to do it, which is the ſame thing) ſuch a man and all that the proſpect of riches or fear of poverty can ſeduce to become ſuch, eaſily break thro' the obſtructions, and grow rich by the very reſtraints that were intended to draw the riches from the hands of the right, the natural owners, into thoſe of the miniſtry. Thus the prohibition becomes an excluſive traffic to the Smuggler, great numbers are ſeduced from innocence, to the ſame vile practices, which lay men under the moſt powerful temptations to all ſorts of corruption, that ever contributed to the deſtruction of a ſtate; and the property of whole provinces may be drawn from the moſt worthy part of the community, and thrown into the hands of the worſt——Mean while, the deſign of the prohibition, which was in itſelf oppreſſive and unjuſt, is effectually defeated; and to revenge the diſappointment of the contrivers, puniſhments are deviſed, on a moſt unjuſt pretence, that Smuggling, is a general, a national crime——and thus the puniſhment, falls upon the very people, and upon them only who were injured by the prohibition, and next by the Smugglers; but had no ſhare in their profits, nor offence, and are puniſhed for being double injured. But the Smugglers, by removing their effects, or by the ſame arts that they acquired them, eaſily eludo the penalties, and eſcape unhurt, except in their principles, which are then fitted to apply that wealth to the worſt purpoſes, that they have acquired by the worſt means, and the puniſhment impoſed fall wholly upon the innocent the virtuous——and the injured!

LONDON, April 25.

YESTERDAY his Majesty went in state to the House of Peers, attended by his Grace the Duke of Rutland, Master of the Horse, and the Earl of Pomfret, and gave the Royal Assent to such Bills as were ready for that purpose; when his Majesty made a Speech to both Houses of Parliament, in which he told them, That the tender concern which he felt for his faithful subjects, made him anxious to provide for every possible event which might effect their future happiness or security.

That his late indisposition, tho' not attended with danger, had led him to consider the situation in which his kingdoms, and his Family, might be left, if it should please God to put a period to his life, whilst his Successor was of tender years.

That the high importance of this subject to the public safety, good order and tranquility; the paternal affection, which he bore to his children, and to all his people; and his earnest desire, that every precaution should be taken, which might tend to preserve the constitution of Great-Britain undisturbed, and the dignity and lustre of it's Crown unimpaired; had determined him to lay this weighty business before his Parliament; and as his health, by the blessing of God, was now restored, he took the earliest opportunity of meeting them, and of recommending to their most serious deliberation the making such provision, as would be necessary, in case any of his children should succeed to the Throne, before they shall respectively attain the age of eighteen years.

That to this end, he proposed to their consideration, whether, under the present circumstances, it would not be expedient to vest in him the power of appointing, from time to time, by instruments in writing, under his sign manual, either the Queen, or any other person of his royal family usually residing in Great-Britain, to be the guardian of the person of such successor, and the regent of these kingdoms, until such successor shall attain the age of eighteen years, subject to the like restrictions and regulations, as are specified and contained in an act, passed upon a similar occasion, in the twenty fourth year of the reign of the late King, his royal grandfather: The regent so appointed to be assisted by a council, composed of the several persons, who, by reason of their dignities and offices, are constituted members of the council established by that Act, together with those whom they might think proper to leave to his nomination.

Yesterday at noon his Majesty came from Richmond to St. James's, when a cabinet council was held on affairs relating to the plantations, at which the principal Lords of the Council assisted, but there was no levee at court.

April 17. One of the Dutch Gazettes by monday's mail, says, "The account of the wild beast in the Gevaudan are of such a nature, that it is hardly possible to give any credit thereto; and yet most of them have appeared in the Paris Gazette, a paper whose authors, known to be men of letters, are too judicious to be suspected of credulity, too prudent, too well informed of what passes at the court of the King their master, one should think, to attribute to his Most Christian Majesty rewards for an action which never had an existence; an action which was only a fable."

His royal highness the duke of Cumberland was with his Majesty at St. James's above an hour the morning that his royal highness set out for Newmarket.

April 18. On the 14th of this month, about two hours after the attempt which the wild beast made on three children, accompanied with their mother, in a garden at Beffiore, he attacked a strong lusty lad of 16 years of age, whom he tore to pieces in sight of the village. On seeing several people coming towards him, he quitted his prey, but not till after he had in great part devoured him, and was within pistol-shot. Altho' the greater part of our readers may regard whatever is said with respect to this animal as fabulous, yet every relation is incontestably true, excepting only that some details, by passing from mouth to mouth, may have received some alteration, or have been differently told by different people. What most astonishes us is, that this beast, which women and children have combated, and might, with proper arms & strength equal to their courage, have destroyed, has yet escaped so many robust and well armed huntsmen who are in pursuit of him, and that assistance has been obliged to be sent for from the other extremity of the kingdom.

Letters from Hamburgh, dated the 9th inst. positively say, that in the Divan at Constantinople war was resolved on against the Russians.

They write from Quebec, that upwards of fifty thousand hard dollars have already been taken since the peace, in exchange for various kinds of iron-work, the manufacture of Canada, exported to the Spanish settlements in South America; which, to all appearance, would prove an inexhaustible fund of trade for that province, but that hands were greatly wanted to carry on the same.

To the Printer of the Westminster Journal.

SIR,

AS it is said that, in the bill which is soon to be brought into the house, for the better paying and regulating the army in his Majesty's American dominions, there is to be a clause that Soldiers may be billetted, or quartered, upon private families, I should take it as a favour if any of your ingenious correspondents would answer the following questions. 1. Whether the subjects of the crown of Great-Britain, in whatsoever part of its dominions they may be settled, are not to be esteemed a free people, and treated as such? 2. Whether they are not entitled to, and ought to enjoy, all the essential rights of Englishmen? 3. Whether an Englishman forfeits all his rights, and is no more a freeman, when he goes abroad and settles in some of the colonies of this kingdom? 4. Whether such people are, or can by any means be deemed free, who are subject to have Soldiers quartered upon them at pleasure? 5. Whether the passing a law for quartering soldiers on private families in our plantations abroad, will not be a large stride towards enslaving us in the same manner at home? 6. And whether our tamely submitting to fix shackles on our fellow-subjects in America, would not shew that we ourselves were ripe for the same in England?

LIBERTAS.

April 20. Some important advices, have this week been received from Saxony, said to be on the subject of approaching troubles on the continent.

The alarm taken at the clause for quartering troops, in private houses in America is not groundless.

Lord Byron, after he was discharged out of custody, took a chair, and so passing thro' St. James's Park, proceeded to his house in Mortimer-street, near Cavendish-square.

His lordship's appearance and demeanour, during the whole course of his trial, attracted the attention of the spectators much, for his seeming serenity and composure of mind.

It appears that it was legal to quarter troops in Private houses in Scotland before the Union, and it never having been altered by law since, troops are to this day in that country quartered at discretion, on those who neglect or refuse to pay the land tax. This is now urged as a precedent for the like measure in America, though we cannot learn any of our colonies ever refused to pay any taxes imposed on them. As Scotland has been produced as a precedent for America, is it not too much to be feared, that e'er long both Scotland and America may be urged for doing the like in England? If once this happens, adieu to all that is dear and valuable to men.

Sunday sevennight, about two o'clock, died at Dublin, after a short illness of two days, in the 79th year of his age, the most Rev. Dr. Charles Cobbe, Lord Archbishop of Dublin; he was educated at Winchester, and then at Trinity College in the university of Oxford. He came into Ireland Chaplain to Charles Duke of Bolton, Lord Lieutenant, in August, 1717, at which time, though unprovided for, he refused the rectory of St. Mary's, Dublin, when lapsed to the crown by Dean Francis's omittal of a proper form in securing his title; which offer he refused with the same generosity of mind that he ever maintained in all parts of his conduct.

There is a talk, that the expediency of encreasing the pay of the army will be very soon taken under consideration; the appointments, which were formerly made in moderate times, for their subsistence, being greatly inadequate to the present extraordinary rise in all the necessaries of life.

22. It is now said, that the wild beast in France is the very same that has long been prophesied in the Apocalypse of St. John, who bears the scarlet whore was mounted; and that the whole story is no more than an allegory. By this ravenous beast is figured the whole body of the Romish clergy; and his voracious appetite answers to another scripture, conceived in these words, "eating up my people as they eat bread," This beast is fearful to make attack on full grown men, i. e. people of hard sense and reason, but preys on women and children only, i. e. the weaker-minded of the people; [illegible] the history, that even little boys (of protestant parentage) have withstood and repelled him: That 20,000 men in arms, going forth to fight the beast, shews the grand inclination of the people, to shake off the yoke, and the King's rewarding the little boys for their bravery, and offering a reward for killing the beast, shews his Majesty's good intention secretly, towards reformation; altho' times and circumstances are not, at present, thought proper for setting up the reformed standard.

According to letters from Rome, the Pope is so ill with a fistula lauchrymalis, that they have been obliged to let his Holiness's blood.

23. We hear the King of Prussia had like to have been burnt by reading in bed; he had fallen asleep, during which the sheets had taken fire.

The King will go to the house tomorrow, to present the Regency bill.

The bill for quartering soldiers in North-America, is put off till next year.

April 26. Yesterday both Houses of Parliament, attended by the right hon. the Lord Chancellor, his Grace the archbishop of Canterbury, and the rest of the Bishops, went in possession to St. James's, and presented the joint Address of both Houses to his Majesty, for his Speech from the Throne; who made them a most Gracious answer.

A particular clause in the marriage-act, so far as regards his Majesty's American islands and plantations is expected to take place this session.

We are assured, that the result of some late important councils, relating to the present untoward disposition of affairs in North America, has been, to remove not only measures, but men, so far as shall be found necessary to encourage commerce and restore the public tranquility in that quarter.

We hear that a certain sum of money arisen, or which may arise, from the duties granted by an act of last sessions, for laying certain duties on goods and merchandize in the American colonies, is to be applied for the payment of his Majesty's troops that are kept for the defence of the said colonies and new acquired settlements.

It is said the court of Versailles, in the last dispatches from London, has been given to understand, that such French ships as shall hereafter be found with certain species of goods on board at Newfoundland, the Gulph of St. Laurence, or any other British territories in North-America, will be seized, and condemned by court-martials on the spot, without appeal; neither are the subjects of that kingdom to be permitted to purchase ready caught cargoes of fish from those of Great-Britain, without incurring the same penalty.

The number of cruizing ships and cutters for the Newfoundland station, during the fishery this season, are ordered to be more considerably augmented than was at first intended, in consequence of some late advices from thence.

We hear the late act for calling in the American Paper currency will not be repealed.

We are credibly informed there is no grounds for a coalition of parties, as has been propagated in several papers.

We hear that his Majesty's ship Belleisle, lying in Hammoaze, at Plymouth, is ordered for America as soon as she can be got ready for sea.

Mr. Wilkes is in very good health at Naples, which he says is the most delightful place he ever saw in his life, and where he proposes to settle. He was visited and complimented by all the English in every town thro' which he passed from Paris to that city.

An approaching coalition, attributed chiefly to the mediation of a personage of the first distinction, is now talked of as a thing certain at the court and the town; in consequence of which, some changes in the highest departments are expected to take place, previous to the breaking up of an august assembly.

We hear a patent will be granted to a certain actor, who lately went to America, to build a theatre in that part of the world, the inhabitants, it is said, being very fond of dramatic entertainments.

Last week the Jew Conjurer won near 300 guineas at whist of a noble Peer.

ANNAPOLIS, in Maryland, May 30.

Friday evening last, between IX and X, we had a very smart thunder gust, which struck a house in one part of the town, and a tree in another.

But we were more THUNDER-STRUCK last Monday, on the arrival of Capt. Richardson, in the ship Pitt, in 6 weeks from the Downs, with a certain account of the STAMP-Act being absolutely passed. It received the royal assent on the 22d of March.

Philadelphia, June 6.

On Monday some difference arose between two sailors, when one of them received a blow near his temple, and another on his breast, which were supposed to be the occasion of his death. He languished about 26 hours.

The public are desired to beware of counterfeit mill'd dollars, as some have lately appeared among us; they are dated in 1758, and seem to have been cast, but the crown and pillar badly done. In the word VNUM, the M very blind) and on the other side FERDIN. VI. the V is scarce to be seen.

[illegible] June 10.

By a Gentleman who arrived here last week from Montreal, we have the following melancholy piece of intelligence, viz. That on the 17th ult. at half after One in the afternoon, a fire broke out in the House of Mr. John Livingston, of that place, and there being only two small engines, and the French extremely ignorant of the method of extinguishing fires, the flames soon spread with great rapidity on both sides of the street, and the wind being very high, 115 houses were entirely consumed by six o'clock in the evening, with immense quantities of goods contained therein, it being the principal street in the place, and where all the English merchants resided. A Nunnery was also consumed, and three Nuns, a French gentleman and lady, and a negro wench were consumed. On the occasion, the army, animated by the presence of brigadier-general Burton, exerted themselves in a particular manner, and it's said 'twas owing to their activity that the whole town was not destroyed, as several of the poor soldiers were much burnt in removing goods from the houses whilst in flames, most of the French inhabitants having retired to their churches, being intimidated by some small explosions of gun-powder, that happened whilst the houses were in flames, as several of the merchants, very imprudently, had quantities of that article in their garrets. 'Tis said the fire was occasioned by a negro wench carrying a quantity of ashes into the upper story of Mr. Livingston's house, not with any bad design, but to be kept there for making soap. The Damage was supposed to be at least £. 180,000 Sterling.

We hear, that upon application of the Rev. Mr. Wheelock, of Lebanon, to the consistory of the Dutch church in this city, desiring their assistance, to enable him to carry on the laudable scheme of spreading the christian knowledge among the Indians; a very handsome collection was yesterday made in both their churches. An example truly worthy of imitation, as the spreading the Gospel among the savages, is certainly the most effectual way to civilize them: and it is therefore to be wished, that collections for the same good purposes, were made in all the churches on the continent, as all will be equally benefitted by their being made a civilized, instead of a barbarous, people, and brought from the errors of paganism to the truths of the Gospel.

Last Friday the Rev. Mr. Whitefield preached his farewell sermon to the inhabitants of this place, and yesterday he embarked for England in the Earl of Halifax packet.

We hear that Mr. Mercerer is appointed Stamp-Officer for the province of New-Hampshire.

The Society for promoting arts, agriculture, &c. held their stated meeting on the 3d instant, when a few of Mr. Quincy's pamphlets on hemp-husbandry were received, and the rest of a hundred copies they had ordered, are expected; it was resolved that the same should be sold by Mr. Jackson at the New-Exchange, at two shillings each. N. B. This treatise is published by order of the house of representatives at Boston, and is recommended by the society to the farmers of this colony.

HARTFORD, June 10.

Jared Ingersol, Esq; of New Haven, now in England is appointed to the Commission of receiving the Stamp-Duties, to be collected in this Colony. It is said he is to have a Sallery of 300l. per Annum.

Hebron, June 6. Yesterday being the Wednesday after Trinity Sunday, there was, in this Town, a Convention of the Clergy of the Church of England, belonging to Connecticut. The Rev. Mr. Leaming, of Norwalk, preached an ingenious and pathetic Sermon on 1 Cor iv. 1. to great Satisfaction. The Rev'd Mr. Hubbard of Guilford, read Prayers, with much Approbation. The Convention for the Year 1766, is appointed to be held at New-Milford; when the Rev'd Mr. Mansfield of Derby is nominated to preach.

About Ten Days since, a Dwelling House in Lebanon, (one of the new settled Townships in New-Hampshire Province) took Fire, while the Family were from Home, and entirely consumed it, and an adjoining Crib of Corn; thirteen Fating Hogs, which were in a Stye near the House, were also destroyed by the Flames.

Last Saturday Evening Capt. Bartlett arrived here in a Brig in 6 Weeks from Bristol, but brings no later News than what we have received by Captain Dixcey.

The same Night died at Milton, Mr. Andrew M'Kenzie, formerly of this Town, Merchant.

Since our last the Rev'd Mr. Samson Occum, an Indian educated at the Rev. Mr. Wheelock's School, preached twice at the Rev. Mr. Moorhead's Meeting House in this town, to the general Acceptance of the Hearers; at the last of which a handsome Collection was made for the Benefit of the School, and to assist several Missionaries now ready to go among the Indians of the Six Nations, who appear well disposed to be instructed in Christianity.---Several private Donations have also been given by some Gentlemen here, to help forward that good design.

☞ An Account of Mr Occum's Education, Character, &c. together with the Rev. Mr. Buell's Sermon at his Ordination, may be had at S. Kneeland's Printing-Office in Queen-Street.

Messrs. FLEETS,

Please to insert the following Song—as, you must be sensible, it very well expresses the present melancholy State of these Colonies compared with that of happier Times.

ARNO's Vale.

WHEN here, Lucinda, first we came,
Where Arno rolls his silver Stream,
How brisk the Nymphs, the Swains how gay,
Content inspir'd the rural Lay:
The Birds in liveliest Concert sung,
The Grapes in thicker Clusters hung,
All look'd as Joy could never fail
Amidst the Sweets of Arno's Vale.
But since the good Palemon died, 11 George 2
The chief of Shepherds and the Pride;
You read Distress in every Face,
And Joy to Sorrow now gives Place:
The Taste of Pleasure now is o'er,
Thy Notes, Lucinda, please no more:
The Muses droop, and Tears prevail,
Adieu! the Sweets of Arno's Vale!
